

Indian Army has shortage of 9000 Women Officers

NEW DELHI: At a time when the Indian Air Force has commissioned three women fighter pilots, the Indian Army is struggling with the sharp decline of women personnel. Following an initiative by the Centre, Avani Chaturvedi, Bhawana Kanth and Mohana Singh became the first women fighter pilots in the country on Saturday. In sharp contrast, the number of women officers in the Army has declined by 50 per cent, in the last six years.

In 1992, the Army had opened its doors for women and in 2011, 166 officers were recruited. However, in 2014, the induction of women officers declined to 100.

In the 2015 Republic Day parade, 75 women officers had participated showcasing the armed forces' "Naari Shakti". This year, the number of women officers went down to 61. Since 1992, the Army has not assessed the requirement of women officers. Now, after their induction in the IAF, the Army may witness a rise in their number, sources said.

NEW DELHI: At a time when the Indian Air Force has commissioned three women fighter pilots, the Indian Army is struggling with the sharp decline of women personnel. Following an initiative by the Centre, Avani Chaturvedi, Bhawana Kanth and Mohana Singh became the first women fighter pilots in the country on Saturday. In sharp contrast, the number of women officers in the Army has declined by 50 per cent, in the last six years.

In 1992, the Army had opened its doors for women and in 2011, 166 officers were recruited. However, in 2014, the induction of women officers declined to 100.

In the 2015 Republic Day parade, 75 women officers had participated showcasing the armed forces' "Naari Shakti". This year, the number of women officers went down to 61. Since 1992, the Army has not assessed the requirement of women officers. Now, after their induction in the IAF, the Army may witness a rise in their number, sources said.

vNEW DELHI: At a time when the Indian Air Force has commissioned three women fighter pilots, the Indian Army is struggling with the sharp decline of women personnel. Following an initiative by the Centre, Avani Chaturvedi, Bhawana Kanth and Mohana Singh became the first women fighter pilots in the country on Saturday. In sharp contrast, the number of women officers in the Army has declined by 50 per cent, in the last six years.

In 1992, the Army had opened its doors for women and in 2011, 166 officers were recruited. However, in 2014, the induction of women officers declined to 100.

In the 2015 Republic Day parade, 75 women officers had participated showcasing the armed forces' "Naari Shakti". This year, the number of women officers went down to 61. Since 1992, the Army has not assessed the requirement of women officers. Now, after their induction in the IAF, the Army may witness a rise in their number, sources said.